

How we use information about students and parents

This document explains what information we collect about students and parents, how and why we collect it, how we use it, who we share it with, and what rights you have. For more, see our Data Protection Policy.

What we collect

We collect information about your child's:

- personal identifiers (such as their name and any unique reference numbers);
- contact details (such as their address);
- performance at college (such as their test scores and exam results);
- wellbeing (such as whether there are any reasons to think they might not be happy in college);
- educational needs (such as what we need to do to make sure they learn as best as you can);
- attendance records (such as which dates they are not in college and the reasons for that);
- behaviour (such as their praise points and detentions);
- opinions and preferences (such as their answers to surveys);
- health records (such as any allergies or dietary requirements they might have);
- picture (such as college photos and CCTV images);
- characteristics (such as their birth date and ethnic background); and
- destination after they leave the college (such as whether they stay in education or find a job).

Some of this information might be sensitive.

We might also collect their fingerprint. This is to make it easier for them to buy food in the canteen. They do not have to provide their fingerprint if they don't want to. They will still be able to buy food in the canteen.

We also collect information about you, including your:

- personal identifiers (such as your name);
- contact details (such as your address, email address and phone number);
- financial information (such as your bank details, payments and balances);
- opinions and preferences (such as your answers to surveys or any complaints you might make);
- family circumstances (such as any issues that might be affecting your child's wellbeing); and
- correspondence with us (such as any letters, emails or text messages you might send to us).

How we collect it

We get most of this information from you or your child through things like:

- the form we get when your child first joins our college;
- the registers we take to check who is in college; and
- the work your child gives to their teacher during their lessons.

In most cases, you or your child have to give us this information. Sometimes, you will have a choice about whether you want to give us the information or whether you want to let us use it in a certain way.

We also get information about your child from other places. This is usually from their last school, the council or the government.

Why we collect it and how we use it

We collect and use this information for different purposes.

To help us run our college (public task)

We have to use this information so that we can run our college, including to:

- get in touch with you when we need to;
- check how well your child is doing and work out whether they need extra help;
- make sure we can help your child learn as best as they can;
- check how well our college is doing as a whole; and
- run other services, like college meals and counselling.

To allow us follow the law (legal obligation)

We have to use some of this information because the law says we must, including to:

- keep your child safe and look after their wellbeing.

To help us promote our pupils and our college (consent)

We might want to use this information as part of our promotional work, including to:

- celebrate your child's achievements on our website, on social media or in a newspaper; and
- help us advertise our college in our brochures and prospectuses.

We will always ask for consent before we use your child's information in this way. We might ask you for your consent or we might ask your child to give their consent. It will depend on whether your child understands what they're being asked to agree to.

If you give your consent for us to do this, you can change your mind at any time. If your child gives their consent, they can change their mind too.

We often need to use this information for more than one reason.

We need to keep some types of information for longer than others. To find out how long we keep information about you and your child, see our Retention Schedule.

Who we share it with

Sometimes, we need to share this information with other organisations.

By law (legal obligation)

The law says we need to share your child's information with:

- the Department for Education, under The Education (Information About Individual Pupils) (England) Regulations 2013; and
- the council, for things such as:
 - making sure your child is safe, under The Children Act 2004;
 - providing youth services and careers advice, under The Education Act 1996;
 - keeping other people healthy, under The Health Protection (Local Authority Powers) Regulations 2010; and
 - making sure your child has an education, under The Education (Pupil Registration) (England) Regulations 2006.

By contract (contract)

Sometimes, we need to ask other organisations to help us do things. We might need to share this information with them so they can do that. These organisations are called our "data processors". The main organisations we work with include:

- CPOMS, which gives us the system we use to store information about your child's wellbeing;
- Aspens, which provides college meals; and
- ParentPay, which lets you make payments for things like college meals.

Whenever we share this information with a data processor, we will make sure they keep it safe.

What rights you have

You have rights about how your information is used and kept safe. For example, you can:

- ask to see the information we have about you;
- say that you don't want us to use it;
- ask us to limit the way we use it;
- ask us to correct it if you think it's wrong;
- ask us to delete it; and
- complain about how we use it.

Your child has the same rights over their information. Depending on the circumstances, you can exercise those rights on behalf of your child.

For more information about your rights, visit the ICO's website: www.ico.org.uk/your-data-matters/.

Complaints

We take complaints about data protection very seriously.

If you have any concerns about how we collect or use personal information, please let us know by contacting our Data Protection Officer (see the next section, called “Contact us”).

If you are not happy with the way we respond to your concerns, you can make a complaint to the ICO:
